Don't Poison Baby.

FORTY YEARS AGO almost every mother thought her child must have PAREGORIO or laudanum to make it sleep. These drugs will produce sleep, and A FEW DROPS TOO MANY will produce the SLEEP FROM WHICH THERE IS NO WAKING. Many are the children who have been killed or whose health has been ruined for life by paregoric, laudanum and morphine, each of which is a narcotic product of opium. Druggists are prohibited from selling either of the narcotics named to children at all, or to anybody without labelling them "poison." The definition of "narcotic" is: "A medicine which relieves pain and produces sleep, but which in poisonous doses produces stupor, coma, convulsions and death." The taste and smell of medicines containing opium are disguised, and sold under the names of "Drops," "Cordials," "Soothing Syrups," etc. You should not permit any medicine to be given to your children without you or your physician know of what it is composed. CASTORIA DOES NOT CONTAIN NARCOTICS. If it bears the signature of Chas. Dr. J. S. Alexander, of Omaha, Neb., says: "A medicine so valuable and beneficial for children as your Castoria, I deserves the highest praise. I find it in use everywhere."

Dr. J. A. McClellan, of Buffalo, N. Y., says: "I have frequently prescribed your Castoria for children and always got good results. In fact I use

TURF BATTLE ON AT HILLS GROVE

Not in many years has a trotting race over a New England half-mile track attracted as much interest as does the meeting at Bangs St. Monday, Wednesday and

The speculation upon this race today fair to swamp any similar event of the kind we have known in New England 25 years, and a throng of Boston horsemen

The meeting of these crack trotters of the New England twice arounds, comes in the $1,000 stake for the 2:22 trotters, and a large field is also entered for the event besides Scintilla and Belvasita. The entry includes Lacco Mald, Major Billard, Emperor Wilkes, Jr., Manize Worthy, Oakland Plover, Creighton, The Saxon, Me-

CINCINNATI, Sept. 7.—The National baseball commission has formally denied the reapplication of F. B. Joy to be declared a free agent.

The records show that Joy was drafted by the Boston National League club in 1907, that he has been tendered a contract each year and has failed each year up to the present time to sign or return.

The commission feels there is nothing in the contract which he signed which provides that transportation must be furnished him or that salary should be paid him in advance. His application is therefore refused.

The match is for 600 balls, 200 to be played nightly. The high run of the night, forty-two, was made by Koehz.

Figure 6 shows the results of the regression analysis. The dependent variable is the number of days off work due to musculoskeletal problems. The independent variables are age, sex, job tenure, education, income, and job satisfaction. The model explains 18% of the variance in the dependent variable. The results show that older workers (age 40 and above) have significantly more days off work than younger workers (age 20-39). Female workers have significantly more days off work than male workers. Workers with less than 10 years of job tenure have significantly more days off work than those with 10 or more years of tenure. Workers with less than a high school diploma have significantly more days off work than those with a high school diploma or higher. Workers with lower income (less than $10,000 per year) have significantly more days off work than those with higher income ($10,000 or more per year). Finally, workers who are dissatisfied with their jobs have significantly more days off work than those who are satisfied.

Alias Jimmy Valentine

By JOHN A. MOROSO

Copyright, 1916, by American Journal-Banner

CHAPTER XX.

It had been a momentary day for Jimmy Valentine. At the end of it he found himself with barely enough money to take him through a week and get him out of Springfield, Ill., allowing railroad fare for the faithful Red.

The Toast to the New Life.

Jimmy's lawyer had been an industrious one in going for and extra charges for evidence, etc., as he had been in his effort to save his client from Sing Sing; and so he was not worried about having stolen goods in his possession. The natural inclination of a reformed man to return stolen goods in his possession did not, in consequence, bother him. The lawyer had extracted the stolen goods from him, as he had extracted them himself from the safe of the store. One theft was done outside of the law and the other just barely inside of it. When they were comfortably seated at their table with their supper before them, Jimmy ordered a bottle of claret.

"I have been inaugurated all my life, Red," he said to his companion, "but I want to drink to my future success, and I want you to join me in dedicating to the everlasting happiness of Miss Lane, who is responsible for my freedom and our chance to live straight and be happy."

"There's a beautiful young girl, Jimmy," said Red, awestruck. "Here's to her and to you. And I wish you good luck, my boy. If you can live to be worthy of such a sweet, good young girl, I hope you'll ask me to be the wedding."

"All Except Doyle,"

"Good, old Red," said Jimmy, patting him on the shoulder across the table. "If you will only ask it out with me, old man, the two of us will never have anything to regret. We are going to have a dream, clean life before us and we're going to live that way. Think of it, Red. After a few years, we'll have money that we've honestly earned; we'll have the respect and affection of people, and we shall have earned that respect and affection. If we do the right thing from now on, we will have homes of our own, and we'll no longer be like hunted beasts. We can sleep easily and our consciences will be clear. We can look any man in the face, squarely, and not be afraid of him saying a thing against either of us. Won't you?"

"But except Doyle," interrupted Red.

"Doyle," repeated Jimmy. "That man is a rascal!"

"Yes, Doyle," repeated Red. "That man is a rascal!"

"I mean a rascal!" said Jimmy. "That man is a rascal!"

BUDDING GIRL MOST BAFFLING TO SCIENCE, SAYS G. STANLEY HALL

WHAT PRESIDENT HALL SAYS OF BUDDING GIRL

Woman, who was once thought useless, comes nearer to having two souls than does man. The budding girl is the most intricate and baffling problem perhaps that science has ever yet attacked. Girls don't like to put on blouses and get right down to specializing. Practice of integrity in word and deed by the adult in the child's environment is one of the best ways to teach truth telling. The most careful watching of the girl by parents should be between the years of eight and ten. More than five times as many babies die during the first year who are not nursed naturally as those who are nursed.

Friendship is at a low ebb. Never in the world have there been as many young girls half orphaned and left to female guidance in school, home and church—President Hall of Clark University.

The best way to carry Ashes is in a Hod!

Crawford

Have an Ash Hod in the base into which all the ashes fall far below the fire. They can't bank against the grates and warp them, and they can be emptied easily without spilling.

The Coal Hod is alongside the Ash Hod—out of the way. This feature is a wonderful labor and trouble saver and is patented.

Another trouble-saver of the Crawford is the patented Single Damper. One motion—slide the knob to "kindle," "bake" or "check"—the range does the rest. No damper mistakes.

The Oven has cup-joint heat flues that heat it alike in all parts.

Ask the Crawford agent to show you and write for circular.

Frankly and Honestly--We Prefer the "Hobble" Skirt

With a "Hobble" Skirt a Woman Can at Least Hop and Walk a Little. With This Costume She Would Be Helpless.

A lady, poetess and philosopher, aroused by the fact that Ella Wheeler Wilcox wears a "hobble" skirt, sends to-day HER picture and her poem.

Observe the lady's picture, with a line beneath it, that she herself has written:

"The Coming Rival of the 'Hobble' Skirt"
(This is the photograph sent by a poetess who has invented her own dress, and wants to remain unknown)

The female genius who sends us this photograph and the letter and poetry published below requests that the photograph of her costume be printed beside a photograph of Mrs. Ella Wheeler Wilcox in her "hobble" skirt.

This request we cannot grant. We publish NO portrait beside the portrait of Ella Wheeler Wilcox. Her portrait always stands by itself. To print any other picture beside it would be GROSS CRUELTY to the other picture.

If we published a picture of Mount Everest, the highest mountain in the world, that picture would stand alone. We wouldn't humiliate any little mountain by putting it beside the GREATEST mountain.

We would not humiliate any little genius by printing the picture of that genius beside Ella Wheeler Wilcox, with or without her "hobble" skirt.

We are glad to receive this letter and the photograph that we publish. It teaches us that there are worse things than the "hobble" skirt. It causes us to reflect and hesitate, and say to ourselves: "How do you know that the 'hobble' skirt is the worst thing that could be? How do you know that you should not be thankful that woman has limited herself to false hair, tight corsets, high heels, straight fronts, narrow hips, 'hobble' skirts, and a few other kinds of foolishness?"

The photograph sent us by the "unknown genius" is certainly extremely beautiful—BUT IT ISN'T PRACTICAL.

A woman dressed like that could not get on or off of a street car. She couldn't go downstairs, or up, in a hurry. She couldn't conveniently handle a typewriter or a baby.

In a hasty moment we rebuked Ella Wheeler Wilcox for following the "hobble" fashion, and doing what other women do.

We retract that rebuke. Apparently, when a woman is left to carry out HER OWN IDEA in regard to dress, and beauty, she invents things far worse than the average invention of the sex as a whole.

As between the great genius, Ella Wheeler Wilcox, dressed in the "hobble" skirt that every fashionable woman wears or plans to wear, and this other genius of to-day, dressed in a costume of her own—GIVE US THE "HOBLE" SKIRT.

Here follows the letter which is sent to us with the photograph published in this column:

Editor of the Boston American.

I, a woman, and a poet unknown to fame, offer a photograph with the suggestion that it be published side-by-side with that of the noted authoress in the "Hobble Skirt." I believe my costume to be an example of the most attractive, graceful, dignified and most modest attire a woman can wear. It calls for no concerted waist nor hobbles of any sort. I think that an untrammelled spirit requires an untrammelled body, and I declare that this invention requires absolute unconcern of physical restrictions.

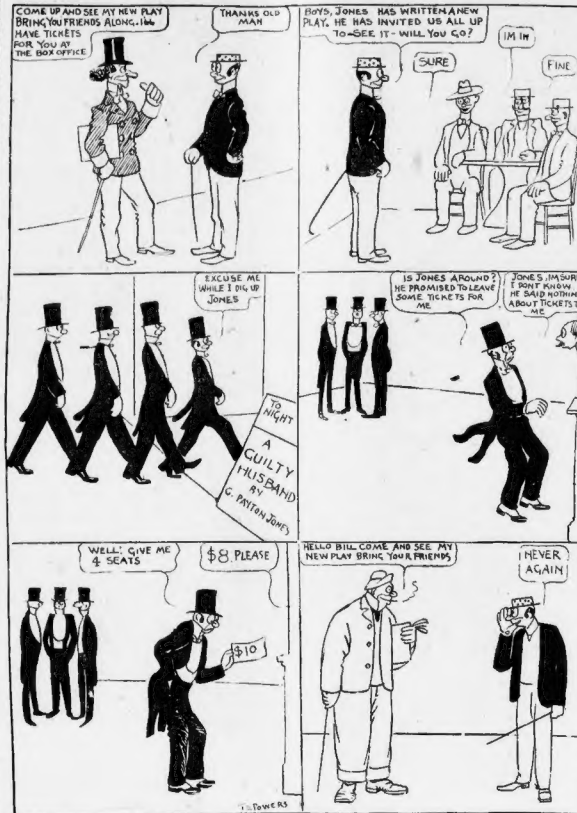

I further affirm that it takes the courage of the truly great to defy foolish conventions and not at all the fashion fashions of the hour. I claim that the present fashions are death throes of originality gone mad and that we must soon witness the rebirth of pure and classic simplicity.

That I also understand something of the power of the "Great Love" is shown by the following, inspired by one line from a poem by the above-mentioned poet and wearer of the "purple hobble."

"You cannot not force my soul to wish thee ill."—Ella Wheeler Wilcox. Nay, rather would I wish thee every good. Dear friend, that will not be my friend. Although no word across the weary space be heard. Good will's more potent than the spoken word. So do I speed all kindly thoughts to thee. For blessings on the days I do live. The great all power of love like morning mist shall flee. Unjust resentment and false founded scorn. Anew shall faith arise to find thy friend in me. And all ignoble aims shall meet thy sure scorn. What thou thyself dost know, against evil vapors weighed Shall wake unerring justice, yet leave thee unafraid. With each new morning's dawn good will and peace I send, Canst thou still be my foe? I am thy friend.

That I understand something of the evolution of the soul is embodied in this:

When man primal on this fair earth wandered— His heart drank in the potent dew of nature's beauties Till his soul awakened and longed to utter all it knew— Then slowly in the womb of mind was thought conceived— It grew, absorbing all the world could teach, And in dumb agony its silence wept. In travail 'till the radiant dawn Beheld the birth of speech!

Again, though in sympathy for all women, and especially my suzerainty sisters, being a wage-earner myself, that I have not lost my faith in man or my ability to love breathes thro' these lines:

To know that you love me is joy supreme, That waking, wonders and lifts its wings And soars to heaven, beyond all pain, Beyond all passion, beyond all gain. And I live as the gods on a height divine, Where the sunlight runs thro' my veins like wine— With a red rose glow in my heart, at rest— I sink to sleep as the sun in the west. Send his good night kiss to the rippling sea— Be the grace of your love death comfort me.

I prefer to write as well as to live behind the veil, therefore my poems and my pictures remain unsigned. A. F. H.

Real Significance of the Vermont and New Hampshire Elections

There is no comfort for the stand-pat Republicans of the country in the returns from Vermont and New Hampshire.

There is much to be found in them that will cheer the hearts and spirits of the insurgent or progressive Republicans and encourage the Democrats.

The New Hampshire result is especially significant. It was the first operation of a State-wide primary law in the East, and the victory of Bass, the progressive candidate for the Republican nomination, by a vote of two to one, shows that the rank and file of his party availed themselves of the first opportunity to vote as their consciences and not as the big corporations of the State dictated.

The New Hampshire result is more proof that only through a direct primary law can the wishes of the people honestly be expressed. It was a thorough routing of the bosses; it was a clean-cut, decisive victory for popular government; it was a heavy blow to the stand-pat, trust element. It is a most encouraging sign of the times.

The result in Vermont is a decisive and emphatic protest against the reactionary attitude of the Republican party and its repudiation of the party's tariff promises in the platform of 1908. These facts—the falling off in the Republican party vote of 24 per cent, the gain of 8 per cent, in the Democratic vote, and Montpelier, the State capital, electing a Democratic Mayor for the first time in a decade—must be taken to mean that many Republicans of Vermont, by failing to vote or by marking for Democratic candidates, evidenced their disapproval of party leaders and policies.

The closing down of mills and varied industries in both New Hampshire and Vermont during a season that had been looked forward to as one of unusual prosperity, a reduction of wages in almost every kind of industry in both States and the increased cost of living, which has borne most heavily upon men of moderate means, were important factors in the campaigns that have just resulted so discouragingly to the regular Republicans, not only of these two New England States, but of the country. Blame was attached to the tariff for existing industrial ills by progressive Republican and Democratic speakers. The results in Vermont and New Hampshire are fraught with a great deal of tariff and cost-of-living significance for the Republican party.

They suggest popular issues to Massachusetts Democrats—wider, broader, more easily operated direct primaries and a demand for a tariff for the benefit of the people rather than for the trusts.

Irrigation

By THOMAS TAPPER

Countless acres of land in America have been transformed from a barren waste to a paradise of fertility. The distant mountains, snow covered, have long sent little streams of water trickling down their furrowed sides, and observing mind puts out and out to gather and make millions, simply by securing the water into reservoirs and sending it to the fields and acres. As it is with land, so it is with the human mind. Countless human beings are of the same and sagacious order. They grow dumb things.

But if they can be made aware of the distant mountains of human thought; if they can be led to guide the streams and gather the water, and build dikes and levees, their mental domain—then there will be a blossoming. This comes from observation, meditation, the study of men in action, of the treasures of books and art, of the high character of business and labor.

Our popular system of education is an effort to allow no unit to escape this control. But as the mill and the school, with the water that has passed, so the child cannot contain the water that floods his mind in the years of childhood. It must be constantly fertilized.

III. RECLAIMED farm that produces its hundreds of acres of crops a home and is a flower garden. The home is for warmth and comfort, companionship, love, and the beauties of life. The flower garden is for beauty and a sense of God's goodness. Every man may plant so much of his mind to luxuries as he chooses; but unless he has a mental home and a mental flower garden into which to retire at times, HE IS THE OWNER OF AN ABANDONED FARM!
